FAQs

What is SELF-e?

SELF-e is a discovery platform designed to expose indie authors' ebook(s) to more readers via the public library, locally or nationwide.

This free service is available to all indie authors, no matter which self-publishing service(s) they use. Distribution via the SELF-e platform is royalty-free and the license signed is non-exclusive.

What if my book is chosen?

Authors whose ebooks are selected by Library Journal for inclusion in the SELF-e collections can use a digital badge promoting their inclusion to potential readers. Their selected ebooks will now be in libraries all over the United States through BiblioBoard, a state-of-the-art digital content platform, in collections organized by genre.

What if my book is not chosen?

Authors whose ebooks are not selected for Library Journal's SELF-e collections can still opt to include their book in the statewide collection with other local authors. Library Journal will not curate these collections; rather, the platform provides libraries with an opportunity to highlight the creative output of their state's indie authors.

Can I do both?

Certainly! The SELF-e service is all about increasing indie authors' exposure in libraries, so authors are encouraged to include their ebooks in their state's collection and submit their ebooks to the SELF-e curated collections.
